

ROUND TOP TRAILS

A Trail - 3.3 miles to lookout (900 ft. elevation gain); 4.5 miles to summit of McGaffey Mountain (1,200 ft. elevation gain)

This trail, designed as a technical mountain bike trail, is also available to hikers and snowshoers. It combines sections of narrow singletrack with wider sections of repurposed logging roads. At 3.2 miles the trail splits into a loop that can be ridden in either direction and reaches the summit of McGaffey Mountain, with ledges, wild blueberries, and fantastic views.

B Trail - 1.3 mile loop (120 ft. elevation gain)

This beginner friendly mountain bike trail leaves from Watson Pond Road across from the Round Top parking area. This trail flows through a beautiful hardwood forest and gives views of a beautiful meadow and site of a historical homestead. This trail also gives access to the Long Pond Trail, as well as the 7 Lakes Nature Center.

Long Pond Trail - 0.5 miles one-way (120 ft. elevation gain)

The Long Pond Trail leaves from the easternmost point on the B Trail, and travels down the hill before arriving at the shore of Long Pond. The trail is designed for mountain bikes, featuring smooth bench cuts descending the hill, with puncheons and technical rocky sections closer to the lake. The trail ends at Long Pond, where visitors can enjoy a scenic picnic area and view of the lake.

Round Top Trail - 3.9 mile loop (775 ft. elevation gain)

This trail offers an opportunity for moderate hiking, with outlooks providing views of the surrounding lakes and mountains. From the parking area on Watson Pond Road, the trail heads through a young hardwood forest for one mile to a junction where a loop begins. Hikers can continue straight or bear right on the snowmobile trail. After 0.75 miles the trail bears left off the snowmobile trail; keep an eye out for a sign. From the highest point on the loop is a 0.3-mile spur trail leading to the summit of Round Top, which provides excellent views to the east.
